OUR BOSTON LETTER.

BOSTON, March 7, 1881.

"The past week has been so disagreeable 'overhead and underfoot,' that people with difficulty got about, either for business or pleasure. It snows one day and rains the next, and the snow and rain and mud combine forces to fill the heart of the disgusted citizen with dismay, and his mouth with profanity. We cheerfully chronicle the fact that the 'oldest inhabitant' has at last some friend who does not remember a winter like this.

The comic opera "Olivette" has entered upon its second month at the Gaiety Theatre, and bids fair to run as did H. M. S. Pinafore. The bright little opera is well filled with pleasing solos, which are nearly all encorred. The "Ideals," at the Boston Theatre, are now singing "The Pirates of Penzance." This animated opera will be followed by "Chimes of Normandy," "Fatinetta," "Bohemian Girl," and probably "Pinafore." Miss Marie Stone assumes the role formerly sustained by Miss Mary Beebe. Mr. Dion Boucicault, who is now playing his first engagement since his return from Europe, at the Museum, made his first professional bow before a large and expectant audience, as "Conn" in the realistic Irish drama, "The Shaughraun." Although Mr. Boucicault has presented this character many times now proposes to take up the unfinished work, and unaided complete it. She is soon to start for Palestine, where she will establish a home for the Americans, also found a school for the benefit of native Arabs. Her system of instruction will be "object teaching." One may obtain a very good idea of this method by visiting a Kindergarten or deaf-mute school. Mrs. Davis was the recipient of a farewell benefit Thursday evening, March 3. The entertainment consisted of remarks by a number of scientific men, who are interested in this work, interspersed with music. The spacious hall was comfortably filled with the friends and admirers of this artist pioneer.

We do not ask this of our subscribers, but if they will aid us with their influence among their friends, who do not take it, they will greatly favor us, and receive our heartfelt thanks.

The working of the third degree of Rev. Geo. I. Bard, by Chocorus Lodge, No. 83, F. and A. M., last evening, was a pleasant event. Invited guests from Moosechilock Lodge of Wentworth, Mt. Prospect Lodge of Ashland, Union Lodge of Bristol, Mt. Lebanon Lodge of Laconia, Blazing Star Lodge of Concord and Washington Lodge of Manchester, were present. After performing the duties at the Masonic Hall, all repaired to the Elm House where "mine host" Burleigh served a bountiful collation, the whole being a very pleasant affair.

We are in possession of a printed letter from the proprietor of the Meredith Eagle, offering that paper for sale, as the publication of the Grafton County Journal and Republican Star are all that he is capable of conducting, for want of time. He at the same time offers to print the Eagle for any purchaser for $3 a week, which includes composition, correcting and presswork. He also says "There are two other papers at a

SYRACUSE CHILLED STEEL PLOW!

OF SYRACUSE, NEW YORK.

First Premium at Pennsylvania State Fair, 1880; First Premium at New York State Fair, 1880; First Premium at National Fair, Washington, D. C., and at Sixty-Three other County and Town Fairs.

It combines all the excellencies of any Plow in use. It obtains all the objections made to any other Plow. It embraces several new features of the greatest value.

The Beam, Fender Standard, and Wheel Standard are STEEL, and the Mold Board is a composition of Steel and Iron, chilled under a process for which we have obtained an exclusive patent.

Its weight is eighteen pounds less than our former style. A first-class Steel Plow, made in the ordinary way, full rigged, retails for twenty dollars.

NIAGARA IN WINTER.

Enormous icicles hang from the edge of the overhanging rock above, and every crack and crevice has its pendant stalactite, sometimes a long and glistening transparent icicle, and again an assemblage of huge bulging columns weighing tons upon tons, and often supported at the top only by a comparatively slender neck of ice. As the dashing spray is driven against them, it builds strange globulous forms that assume all sorts of fantastic imagery.

The view from beneath the Canada Fall was like a dream of fairy-land. A charming vision, overarched by the luminous double rainbow, and thousands of snowy gulls disporting in the ascending mist. But one can get only a glimpse, for drenching torrents of spray are ever and anon driven in upon you with a violence that takes your breath away, and almost throws you off your feet. Your face is as wet as though you had just been dipped under water, and the unfortunate man who wears a beard feels an ever-growing weight tugging at his cheeks and chin, which, in a short space of time would become incased in a lump of solid ice, and have to be supported by the hands.

Luna Island presents the most striking effects of frost-work. Being situated between two falls, and directly at the edge of the same, it catches an immense volume of spray. Every semblance of tree or twig is incrustated with ice, presenting the most weird collection of statues that can be imagined. There are groups of big-headed babies playing with balls, marvelous looking horses, sheep, nude figures, crosses, objects which look like caricatured human figures, and others which resemble extravagant hobgoblins, ghosts of a horrid nightmare, unlike anything on the earth, or the waters under the earth. There are slender trees whose twigs are incased in bewilders of this snowy ice over a foot thick. Many trees break beneath the weight, and others become so encased that they are scarcely of

When a statue at Pallas was disinterred the other day from Grecian soil, its discovery struck the mayor of Athens as being of such good omen to the warlike projects at present entertained by his countrymen, that he promptly ordered it to be employed to the worst purpose. Singular opportune discoveries, some what akin to that of the Athenian Minerva, were made in Servia a few weeks before the outbreak of the rebellion in 1876. A Servian peasant digging potatoes in a field near Kruguevatz, turned up the antique diadem of Cesar Dushan, a fact which when the principality was an empire, would have been a great omen. Just about the same time another lucky agriculturalist managed to excavate the Servian emperor Lazar's sword from the ancient battlefield of Kossovoopol, upon which the Czillak hosts were defeated with terrible slaughter, in the year 1389. Great sympathizers, as we named above, the Slav sympathizers, as well as native Serbs, by the recovery of these inestimable national relics. It turned out, however, later on, that Dushan's diadem was a clumsy imitation crown, buried in a situation convenient for its discovery, by an ingenious agent of a Pan Slavist committee. Further inquiry into the matter, Lazar's imperial grave to be a rusty blade of modern fabrication.

The munging of the American continent has its counterpart in the "brum-bie" of Australia, large herds of which exist in the interior parts of Queensland and New South Wales. These animals are so numerous that they have often been destroyed and boiled down for the sake of their tallow and hides; and in some of the newly settled districts, they swarm in such numbers that the squatters have to protect themselves and their pasturage against their inroad. Brum-bie stalking is a recognized pastime, the destruction of the wild hogs being as necessary to the squatters as the

I hadn't been in Crawfordville since my visit of three years ago, but I recognized it in a minute. The train runs in at the ugliest part of the town, as the trains usually do, sneaking along the back streets and alleys, as though it was ashamed to show its face. No clothes, and no one to come into town like a train. The railroad holds its head high, elegant and puts on the style of a diamond pin in the country, but when it comes to the town, it usually dodges in back of the barn, and stands panting and shivering among a cluster of doggeries and hovels and shanties, as though it was a nervous tremor lest some respectable person standing there wonder what such a handsome, expensive train was doing in such a disreputable locality.

"It sneaks in, in an unobtrusive, modest way," said the tall, thin passenger, "like an anatomical famine breeder, sliding along toward the foot of the lunch counter bar, where the tongue and crackers stand."

"Or," said the sad passenger, "like a poor relation backing into a dark corner at his rich cousin's wedding."

"Or," said the passenger with the sandy goatee, "like a boy trembling in the back seat at school the day after he has played hooky."

"Or," said the man on the woodbox, "like a man going into the bank to get a note extended after it has gone to protest."

"Or," said the man with the sample cases, "like a man going up into a fifty-dollar town after he had seen $2,000 worth of sample trunks and kiesters piled upon the platform, all from other hands in his own line."

"Or," said the brakeman, "like the man without a ticket, sliding into the worst seat in the shabbiest car."

"Or," said the woman who talks base, "like a man in a millinery store at a

Dr. W. Ross Writes:
Scrofula, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Weakness.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:
I have been practicing medicine for 25 years, and as a remedy for scrofula, liver complaint, dyspepsia, rheumatism, weakness, and all diseases of the blood, I have never found its equal. I have used VEGETINE for seven years and have never had one bottle returned. I would heartily recommend it to those in need of a blood purifier.
Sept. 18, 1878. Dr. W. Ross, Druggist, Wilton, Iowa.

H. R. STEVENS, Boston:
I have been selling VEGETINE ever since it came into existence, and have recommended it to my customers. I have tried it myself, and find it a great blood purifier and restorer of the system.

W. HIPPEE, M. D., SAYS:
